

Abstract of the disclosure

The present invention provides load balancing based on the real-time load status of servers. A load balancer providing load balancing in multiple servers for service requests from a client includes: means for estimating load resulting from the service requests based on header information in the service request packets; and means for managing estimation values for each server to which requests are to be sent.